Chapter 208: The Nine Divine Dragons

The Nine Divine Dragons stood as living embodiments of the divine power that flowed through the veins of their parents: Sung Jin-Woo, the God of Shadows and Life, and Sung Su-Ho, the God of Dragons and Fire. They were not merely powerful beings; they were the next generation of the divine, the legacy of the Divine Triad, and their influence stretched far across the multiverse.

The Formation of the Nine Divine Dragons

The Nine Divine Dragons were an exalted lineage, a direct reflection of their parents' might. They were revered and honored by all who dwelt within the realms under the Divine Triad's rule, not only for their power but also for their lineage. These dragons were the living continuation of the divine reign, each possessing the potential to one day become as powerful as their forebears.

1. Sung Ye-Jun and Sung Ye-Rin were the elder members of this sacred group. Their legacy had shaped the Nine Divine Dragons, with Sung Ye-Jun and Sung Ye-Rin having borne children whose greatness would echo throughout the ages. As the first to ascend, they stood as pillars of strength and wisdom, guiding the younger generations and ensuring their legacy continued with unwavering power.

2. The Seven Younger Dragons:

Sung Ye-Jun's children: He had three children, each of whom was a divine dragon in their own right. Their hearts burned with the fiery power of their father, each embodying aspects of the primordial flame, with abilities that surpassed mortal comprehension.

Sung Ye-Rin's children: She bore four children, each of whom inherited her powerful connection to the balance between light and shadow. Her children held immense control over both fire and shadow, their powers combining the elements of light and darkness into a harmonious force.

The Unity of the Nine Divine Dragons

The Nine Divine Dragons were bound not only by blood but by their devotion to their divine parents and their shared purpose in the multiverse. Together, they formed an unbreakable bond, one that had been forged through trials and the divine will of the Divine Triad.

1. Sung Ye-Jun and Sung Ye-Rin held the most revered positions within the Nine Divine Dragons. Their status was above all others, being the first-born and the closest to their divine origins. With their wisdom and experience, they guided their children in the ways of the gods, ensuring the strength and legacy of the Nine Divine Dragons would never falter.

2. The Other Seven Dragons grew in power with each passing day, their connection to the Divine Triad and their heritage making them formidable beings. As the descendants of Sung Jin-Woo and Sung Su-Ho, they were destined for greatness. Their powers, amplified by their dual heritage, were unmatched by any other beings across the realms.

The Divine Order: The Twelve Divine Beings

The Twelve Divine Beings now stood as the supreme forces in the multiverse, split into two main factions: the Divine Triad and the Nine Divine Dragons. Each of these beings played an integral role in maintaining order and overseeing the vastness of the realms.

1. The Divine Triad: Composed of Sung Jin-Woo, Sung Su-Ho, and Ashborn, they were the creators, the protectors, and the rulers of the multiverse. Their control over creation, life, and eternity ensured that no force could challenge their authority.

2. The Nine Divine Dragons: The direct descendants of Sung Jin-Woo and Sung Su-Ho, the Nine Divine Dragons wielded the power of both fire and shadow, their strength magnified by their divine bloodlines. They were not only warriors but also guardians, leaders, and rulers of their respective realms. Their bond to the Divine Triad was inseparable, and together, they formed a nearly invincible force.

The Legacy of the Divine Dragons

As the Nine Divine Dragons walked through the multiverse, their presence was felt like a divine storm. They were revered as gods in their own right, their power a reflection of the greatness of their forebears. Each step they took was one that resonated throughout the realms, and their very names were enough to stir awe and reverence among those who served under them.

With the Nine Divine Dragons at the helm, the realms they governed flourished. Their followers, blessed by their divine gifts, were granted the power to ascend to new heights, becoming warriors of unimaginable strength. Together, they formed an unstoppable force, bound by the will of the Divine Triad and their divine purpose.

The Twelve Divine Beings—the Divine Triad and the Nine Divine Dragons—stood as the unchallenged rulers of the multiverse, their reign eternal and their legacy unyielding.

The age of dragons, shadows, and fire had only just begun.